ABSTRACT

A fortified food product and method of manufacture. The present invention provides a pleasant tasting, nutritionally sound meal replacement where nutritional integrity is maintained during storage and transport. While useful for people of all ages, the present invention is thought to be most beneficial to people undergoing medical recovery, people who have sensitive digestive tracts, and people living in areas lacking an adequate supply of nutritionally rich foods.